INTRODUCTION

Learning is done in the classroom consist of two components as teacher and student. Teacher is an education sub-system that transferred knowledge to students, otherwise student is person who accept the learning. Teacher and student are one unity that cannot be separated and it really important to consider the motivation. That's why teacher did not only give the materials to students but teacher as motivator which teacher give motivate, spirit to students in accepting the learning.

Teacher has an important role to develop academic and character student, it is a teacher role as advisor really useful that teacher should have competence to give high motivation to the students so that students get the high result. In learning activities process is need motivation teacher in learning.

In each school higher achievement of learning student signed higher teacher motivation in teaching to the classroom. According to Usman, M one of character teacher professional have spirit in giving service to the students that related with giving a high motivation to the students, including all of the subject especial English subject

In English learning, students are asked competence such as reading, speaking, listening, writing so teacher need to encourage students to belong the motivation, the high spirit in English learning.

LITERATUE REVIEW

A. Definition of motivation

According Moslow in Mulyasa (2002) explained motivation is propelling force that caused have the character to the goal.

According to Purwanto, motivation is the driver of an effort to be realized to influence someone's behaviour so that they are moved to act to do something so as to achieve certain results or goals. Brown said that motivation is an affective variable that must be considered in the language learning process

Based on this motivation, it can be concluded that motivation is an encouragement that is carried out to achieve certain goals and motivation is a determining factor in learning success, if students have high learning motivation, learning outcomes will also be high.

B. Kinds of Motivation

According to Gagne and Limbert, in mastering language, motivation is distinguished into two namely; 1) Integrative motivation which means motivation that is driven by the students' desire to integrate with the culture and language they are learning; 2) Instrumental motivation is a motivation that is based on the expectation that by mastering a foreign language or English one can achieve something for example a better job. Based on its nature, it is divided into two, namely intrinsic and extrinsic motivation. First intrinsic motivation is a motivation that arises from oneself and is not influenced from outside while second, extrinsic motivation is motivation that arises from within a person because of the influence of stimulus outside the actions he does. Based on the division of motivation from Gagne and Lambert and motivation based on the nature, actually both motivations are equally important in fostering interest in improving English language learning.

C. Teachers' motivation in learning English.

Teachers teaching motivation is a stimulus/encouragement for teachers to impart knowledge to students. When English teachers provide material in the teaching and learning process, teachers must prepare what methods or strategies will be conveyed to the students, methods and strategies are important that make students interested in receiving English learning in the classroom without the students feeling bored with English subjects, but motivation is also no less important because when the teacher acts as a motivator to the students which students who previously did not have enthusiasm to learn English will be motivated because they are encouraged by the teacher. There are three factors that most often receive the attention of researchers in conducting research on a person's factors in learning a foreign language or English; 1) Ability to master English due to talent; 2) Ability to master English due to motivation; 3) Ability to master English by chance (Santosa RB; 2017)
